Is it difficult:

It is not difficult. Just don't be afraid of making mistakes. Nobody is perfect. Even President of America commits mistakes while writing and speaking. You don't even notice when you commit mistakes while speaking or writing your mother tongue. The basic purpose of a language is communication. It is transferring of your thoughts or intentions to the person you intend to advise or communicate.

Still why you need to be accurate/correct:

Look, the main job/work done by any language is transferring of ideas, thoughts to the desired person. And if it is not done correctly we will be failing in its basic objective of conveying our thoughts or instructions.

Good Writing/Good Speaking:

Good writing and good speaking are like making a painting. Words are like colours. Grammar gives the structure. Structure guides you how to fill colours. So, in case you want to make a beautiful painting you must use structure (grammar) and colours (words) properly in a disciplined manner in some definite patterns. Learning more words is like discovering new colours for your painting. With grammar you will be able to create new structure for your painting of communication. Don't you think that any new story is like a painting with new structure and colours.

And if the words are used correctly the story is beautiful and can convey the message it intends to convey. You can create your paintings of conversations.
